Love Thy Friends Consistently . . .

Republicans continue to delight in Jimmy Carter's geographical morality. "We publicly berate

Chile and South Korea for their woeful disregard of human rights," said former United Nations Ambassador George Bush. "But we express appreciation when North Vietnam tantalizingly disgorges the names of a handful of aviators shot down years ago — something they should have done promptly in accord with the Geneva Convention." Bush, also a former Republican national chairman, was speaking at University of Houston commencement exercises.
